Not you. Not me. God is the first to love. According to Pope Francis, God loves us first because he himself is love, and, by its very nature, love tends to spread and give itself. He does not love because there is something in us that engenders love. The first step that God takes toward you and me is that of a love that anticipates and is unconditional.

Science teaches us that the universe is everything and it is expanding. The visible universe reveals that all of the galaxies in the universe are moving away from each other, and every region of space is being stretched. But astrophysicists like Paul M. Sutter would argue that the universe is expanding, but isn't expanding into anything else. "There's no center they're expanding from and no outer edge to expand into anything else", he affirms.

Is this understanding of the universe an allegory to understand God's love?

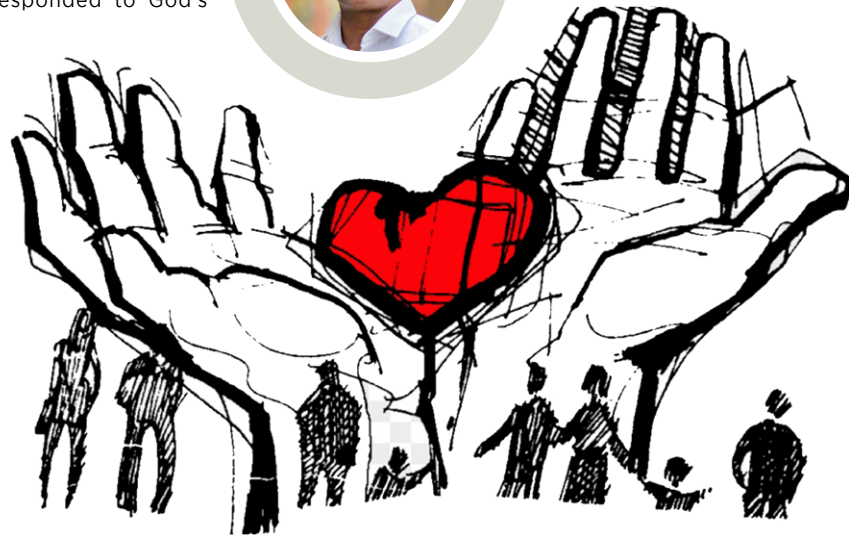

Therefore, whether you are now or then; here or there, you are in time and space of God's universal love for you and me. You are in his love always and everywhere. Because he loved us first and we responded to God's love. And that is why our heart aspires to great things, lofty values, deep friendships, ties that are strengthened rather than broken by the trials of life. "The human being aspires to love and to be loved," Pope Francis reiterated, "This is our deepest aspiration: to love and be loved; and definitively."

Love and be loved. Be a channel of love, here and now.

Sir... Post...!

Love is patient, love is kind. It does not envy, it does not boast, it is not proud. It does not dishonor others, it is not self-seeking, it is not easily angered, it keeps no record of wrongs. Love does not delight in evil but rejoices with the truth. It always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always perseveres. Love never fails.

1 Corinthians 13:4-8

LOVE OR SUCCESS? SAME THING!

Isn't it funny? How we run away with a broken heart from a love that we thought would heal us? Maybe that is what love does to us. It makes us want to leave the world for the happiness that it tempts us with, and just like that, in a blink of an eye it could all turn out to become just a coax. Love manifests itself in art and true to this, we have thousands and thousands of films, songs, poetry, prose, literature, paintings and innumerable other art throughout history where time and again, artists have shown us how love wrecks the one who trusts it. But we are humans; and so, we never learn! Because as much as much love can break a heart, it can build one. And as much as love is considered a poison, it's sweetness can be blissful. But of course, love does not treat us that way every time, because there exists, a million types of love in this world, and each one is a gem of its own.

It all begins with the selflessness of a mother and from there a father, friend, family, teacher, stranger all become a part of teaching us different variations of love - Support, courage, a shoulder to cry...

so on and so forth. We learn from each of them that love doesn't always have to be romantic and sexual. But just beautiful in a way that exudes security even in the strangest of hearts. The way in which an unknown person steps forward to help a wounded person on the road, a stranger who politely helps you find directions and a fellow passenger who spares change for the bus all seems to be little ways of services to a fellow human being. But without love toward the feeling of being humane to another, would these actions even matter? Though this is the truth, we often forego this notion because the world is just so fast for a love that demands time, effort and the very being.

We find ourselves judging too often, a little too quickly at that... About others and their choices. Not seeing the amount of time, thoughts, passion and the fight against everything that opposes them, that they might have invested to achieve even a tiny little thing in their lives. But of course, the pressure of always having to be better than others, has easily led us to not being appreciative of this investment. We just got to have the most recent, updated, fashionable and awesome lifestyle so much that we forget that some of us have to find the will to wake up and fight today against everything that tells them to back down - very simply referred to as the love they have for living. Not existing, but living. And each time they choose to love life like that, most shy away from accepting it and would rather criticize and push them into a what each of us are suffering from right now. The constant urge to win a race in which we think we ought to win over others, but in reality, only keep losing ourselves.

Is that worth it then? To forget that we as humans are simple creatures, born to love and share what we have... Because at the end of the day none of us know when it's time to leave and we definitely know that when it is indeed time, we are not going to be taking anything with us. And if so, why all the hate? As I wrote earlier, love isn't easy but it does not deserve neglect from us either. Trust issues, red flags, selfishness, the run for the better, lack of understanding are all easy to point out in any relationship... In some, it is important to step away from these, and in some it becomes merely a disguise to cover the fact that we belong to times when it is as easy as to unlove as it is to love. Of all the things that we can easily and quickly find on our phone, love has become the most common - To look for a friend to chat with, a stranger to confide in without being judged and a partner to face life with.

In spite of which we have forgotten to appreciate affection. Or rather, because of which we have forgotten to appreciate affection. The lure of this world is tempting - Money, fame, power, the will to be on top of others. But are you loved? It could be a person who did not want to be alive today, but because you smiled, they felt better. By a person who you always used to judge for their life choices, but then realized that they have a war to fight which yours can't be compared to. By a person who you see in the mirror everyday - the one will understand that one day all this pain will not matter, and be happy that they've loved their way through this race. Because in the end, it doesn't matter how big or small we love a fellow human being, we would've won and that is enough. .

LOVE ISN'T EASY BUT IT DOES NOT DESERVE NEGLECT FROM US EITHER. TRUST ISSUES, RED FLAGS, SELFISHNESS, THE RUN FOR THE BETTER, LACK OF UNDERSTANDING ARE ALL EASY TO POINT OUT IN ANY RELATIONSHIP... IN SOME, IT IS IMPORTANT TO STEP AWAY FROM THESE, AND IN SOME IT BECOMES MERELY A DISGUISE TO COVER THE FACT THAT WE BELONG TO TIMES WHEN IT IS AS EASY AS TO UNLOVE AS IT IS TO LOVE.

DO I REALLY LOVE?

In all the languages in the world, the holy word next to the word 'God' is 'Love,' because love is the centre of human life and it is love that leads the universe. Every newborn child brings the message that God still loves the world, which is His creation as far as religious sentiment is concerned. The creation of the earth, the maintenance of it, the existence of it and the like are designed out of love of God. The whole universe functions on one unique character, i.e. Love. Similarly, the most corrupt word is also Love because by using the word all the atrocities are done on this earth.

Nothing is equitable to mother's love. From bearing in the womb, delivering, bringing up and finally making the child as a scholar in the world, the mother sacrifices her health, wealth, time and energy. Only a mother knows the need of the child. She gives what is essential to the child. She becomes the ultimate guide to the child. The mother knows the child from its appearance whether the child is healthy or weak. That's why the mother is the great temple for the child. Only those who lost their mothers know the pain of lack of mother's love. Similarly, the love of the father is immeasurable. The pain of labour throughout his life is not for himself but for the children.

What is love? The question has multiple answers. Basically, love is an emotion which an animate being exhibits on other animate being, even at times on inanimate beings. For instance, a human being, loving another human being, is the result of an emotion that is innate in both of them. Similarly, a human being may fall in love with an art, though it is an inanimate being, the person involves as if it has life. This basic emotion is also culturally constructed. In Tamil language, the word love has several forms. The love between the parents and the children is different from the love between a husband and a wife. In English, the same word is used but in Tamil, there are other words to designate such an emotion. Each culture has its own form of expression of love.

characteristic of love is caring, approving and accepting. This is easily found among couples, friends and families. When this is lost, there is break up among couples, friends and families. Today, we find two extremes of these characteristics, i.e. self-utilized motive governs love. There are real people who love each other selflessly and there are people who love others for their own sake. Once needs are met, the love dwindles. This is the common phenomenon, we find in the society.

Love has to be analysed from the context of globalization. The birth of globalization in the late 20th century is a bane or boon is yet another area of research, which I will not indulge at present. However, the birth of globalization is a planned colonisation, which was initiated at the demise of proper colonialism. The invention of sea route to the East as well as to the West initiated the process of colonialism. From the context of India, the Europeans, who entered into the land for trading, occupied the land on the course of time, assessing the land as easy to accessible, stayed in the land for centuries. They began with trade, continued to occupy the land and finally ruled the land with power and ammunition. This is quite true in many parts of the world. Only at the beginning of the 20th century, the native people understood the process of colonisation and fought against colonisation and at the middle of the 20th century, almost all the countries in the world became independent. In fact, colonisation is not yet finished. What the Europeans did in the past is done by America and the allied countries at present in a different form.

The colonised countries are the markets of the colonizers. Hence, the colonisers thought that the independence of the countries might result in the closure of the foreign goods and thus the economic situation of them would be at fall. They needed markets to sell their products and draw cheap labours. Consequently, they opted for a worldwide-accepted forum for their market. This accepted intelligent brainchild is globalization. In a globalized world, profit is the focal point and human welfare or ecological welfare is not of its interest. Seemingly, the globalized world shows as if it is interested in the welfare of humans as well as ecology. A small analysis of diabetics would tell us the cruelty of medical business.

Globalization has affected the life-pattern of humans. There was a time when, humans worked during the day and rested during the night. Now the whole system is changed and the increase of sickness is numerous too. Let me not delve into that matter. As globalization has converted humans into consumable products, like human emotions have been altered into consumable products, resulting the divine physical relationship that has to be between husband and a wife is in the market for sale. If an expression of love can be bought for money, it shows that humans have gone from humans to inanimate beings. Therefore, the real love in its most wanted emotional aspect is reducing profoundly.

The consequences can be seen in the society. Money has occupied the place of love. Consequently, the parents are more interested in earning money for their children than being with them and finally losing their children rather than earning them. Recently, a young man died of an accident and it was said that his parents were in abroad. In reality, they lost the only son. Will the money give satisfaction to them? This is where globalization has taken us. Private schools, tuitions, grand accommodation, costly commodities and the like have made people move away from real love. Indeed, they show as if expression of love but not.

What is being established is that the seeming reality of love. Love is projected as one that is for the welfare of humans. Consequently, lot of promises, free gifts, advertisements are found everywhere. Nevertheless, underneath swindling of money, looting, scams, bribe, poor administration, authoritative brutality, accusation of others, degradation of ethnicity, discrimination of caste and creed, everything happens under the covered mirage of love. The political power is obtained using the slogan 'love for the country.' Does the love for the country exist? A question needs lot of attention. Most of the times, it becomes love for the family or the persons. Those who are in the power are supposed to plan for the people but they plan for themselves. However, in common parlance, they assure nothing other than the welfare of the country is their motive.

Now the expression, good of the humanity is prevalent everywhere. It is expressed from the background of pandemic, the people are compelled to take vaccine, and none of the governments in the world has manifested the aftermath of the vaccines obviously. What is manifestly hidden in the vaccination is global marketing and the formation of the globe as having everything same. The so-called human lovers do not approve the local medicines, native medicines, country medicines, and the like. Thus, enumerating the nuances of love is endless in a globalized world. Those who are supposed to love the people have become marketing agents.

In that case, what is lacking is the exercise of education. Education has become mere preparation of human machines, which will function like machines and it will be satisfied with the huge sum of money as salary. Education, which is supposed to educate humans as loveable and loved beings, has become an agent of labour. All the atrocities in the world are done by the highly educated people, let that be violence, immorality, looting, scam, war, and so on. Where's love for humanity? Where's love for ecology? Today, the forest fire has become common. Last summer, Europe, America and African countries met very bad forest fire. These are the consequences of obsession for money.

The most important and valuable of human emotions is love. It is love that sustains humanity. Now humans have gone away from this emotion due to consumerism introduced by globalization. Love must be reconstructed in human minds in its original sense. The original emotion of love does not allow the other to perish. Love does not allow authority to strangle those who question them, rather corrects it. Love helps the power to live for the people. Love helps people to be real humans. It does not allow obsession for money, wealth and power. It is love that sacrifices oneself. "Father forgive them" – the words of Jesus on the cross is an expression of love. If someone has laid his or her life for the society, it is out of love for the society.

Let us be real lovers in the sense let us love other truly. Let the power does not allow us to exploit the society. Family is greater than the money and wealth. Let our education instill our real emotion of love. Let us use our education to bring up the society and not loot the society. Let love bring divinity among human beings.

A Battle of Strife

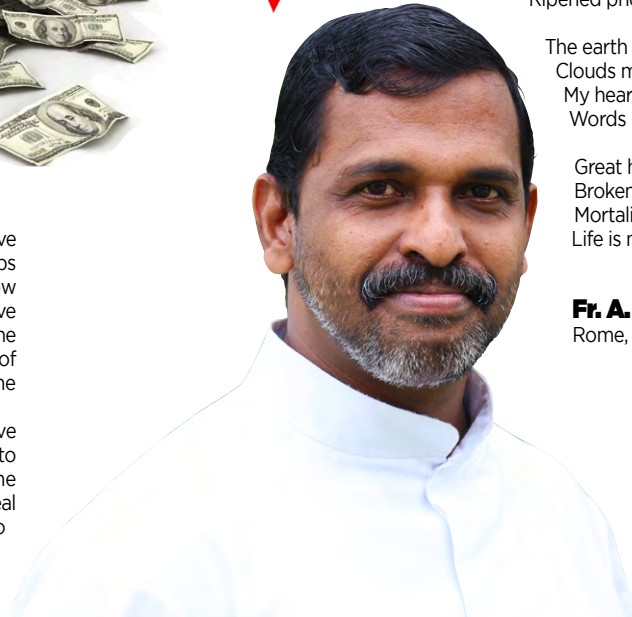

The sun rests in the sea in the West
The moon rises in the sky in the East
Gentle breeze passes on me from the West
Stare on the mountain yonder in the North.

My love has been snatched away from me
Bereaved soul plunges in grief without he Passed from this world to the other
Ripened prior to its age to wither.

The earth becomes darker and gloomy
Clouds make the sky further added shadowy
My hearts sinks in tragic somber grief
Words become powerless for agony brief

Great hope had I make him great
Broken hopes are found in rest
Mortality wins immortality in life
Life is nothing a battle of strife.

THE LITTLE THINGS IN LIFE

Love, a purest form of emotion never has bounds or limits to itself. It is a feeling that can be special and indescribable. A mother's love, self-love, love for your new job or your love towards a particular person - there are various forms of love and affection in this world. While taking a stroll in the streets of Chennai, I came across a woman who was radiating a bright smile, sitting behind a fruits stall under a majestic neem tree.

This woman with a warm beetle-stained smile, clad in a rustic colour of green and red named Sakthi welcomed me. During the course of our conversation, little did I know I would learn about the arduous journey of this 55-year-old who conceals her woes and worries underneath her chirpy appearance.

Hailing from a village in Theni, Tamil Nadu, Sakthi tells her tale of hard work and growing into the woman she has become today. "I came to Chennai with my two children at the age of 22. I drove this very fruit stall tirelessly and worked like a man, despite my ill health to take care of my family". She continues talking about her journey from being just a small-town girl to a strong mother of two.

"Now, I live happily with my children and my grandchildren. They take care of me and although we do face financial troubles, we live a content and proud life without being in debt," Sakthi says as tears of pride and joy run down her aged-cheek.

Sakthi firmly believes that the trees that are near her stall - Neem and Banyan stands tall to protect her livelihood from troubles. She even credited the long-standing oak for being the reason her and her family did not contract the COVID-19.

"Chennai may be just a place to the residents here but as someone who left behind everything to settle down, I have an irresistible compassion towards the people here. The sun shines bright and the rains are harsh, just like people but again that is the beauty of the city here," she added. Sakthi also believes that her devotion to Lord Shiva in turn brings blessing to her family through the winds that flows along the neem tree.

Watching Sakthi talk about how that she loves and cares for the tree, just as much as she loves her children and other such little joys in her life was the most heart-warming sight for sore eyes. Her perspective on life in the post-COVID era is contrary to the common perception of people from lower socio-economic backgrounds. "I struggled hard to make my ends meet since March 2020 but there was one thought that kept me going amidst the chaos - I have no right to cry over not making money, when people are suffering with the dreadful virus every single day. I count my blessings, every night before I shut my eyes and pray that the Lord ends the miseries of those in deeper troubles than my own," she added.

The compassion and gratitude for life that Sakthi carried nearly moved me to tears. "I have never wanted money or property. What is the point of wanting to earn millions and millions? At the end, what remains is how happy you have lived your life. Education, love and knowledge are the true wealth one can possess", she says. One can find the adoration and deep affection of Sakthi for her grandson Mani, who rides away on his bicycle to school.

Love is abundant, love can be found in the souls of every being. I sincerely hope that in this pandemic and tough times, we should not forget that beyond every suffering, there will always be a better day.

scientifically proved. The development of the human child shows anger and vexation produces the hate hormone cortisol in the human body is the outcome of stress and the remaining diseases. The life style of the human beings is designed either by Oxytocin or

Jesus said about the Jews in the Gospel of Thomas in verse 43 as "for they (either) love the tree and hate its fruit (or) love the fruit and hate the tree." The very truth is happening in each and every body life. There is no full love in everybody, partial love in every living thing was exposed by the Christ. Thomas confirms Christ commandment "Love your brother like your soul, guard him like the pupil of your eye." No one can explain about love as Jesus.

In the present unisex continents partial love and partiality love are the dominant one. All the religious leaders expel their love only in words not in deeds. All the political leaders are demonstrating the love as an artificial act. All the social leaders

The most important thing in the world is to receive and giving love, as we have conversation in the mobile phone. Humans can receive and sent feelings; this technology is reinvented in modern science. If both have love feelings in them then they fall in love, it is the universal love sutra. And if the same has hatred feelings among them then their relationship will be broken. Jesus rightly said love your enemies. It is a difficult job for the entire world to love their enemies. If you emit love continuously then the enemy will start love with you.

Paul propounds love as "Love is patient and kind; love does not envy or boast; it is not arrogant or rude. It does not insist on its own way; it is not

Cortisol. The goodness and evil travels inside the human body and the feelings of the humans decide the secretion of love and hate.

When you feel love is easy then love is easy, when you feel love is hard then love is hard. Love is the universal feeling irrespective of the living organisms. Even a plant can feel a human love. When a living organism feels the love of the god it follows with miracle. The production of the hormones is peak at the age of youth. Hence love starts at youth and every youth are under the influence of the love hormones are booked under the POSCO Act in the state of Tamil Nadu. Honour killings are quite common for inter-caste love marriage in all sectors in India. India also has several restrictions to marry the foreign citizens as the outcome of international love.

Usually, the earth speaks the lust as love. But the real love not comes from the lust. Sophia is the archangel love of the Western world. Eros is celebrated for romantic love. Philia is for affectionate; Agape is worshiped for selfless love. Playful love was played by Ludus. Pragma is the long-lasting love angel.

Fairy tales for the prince and young ladies are world hit love stories. In the most developed modern world, the only unchangeable thing is love feeling among humans.

provide their love for a segment of the society by cursing another segment of the society. No one in the world is taught about full and unconditional love.

Authors like Dr. Zhu preaches that unconditional love is god. He says everyone to emerge their unconditional love from each and every part of the human body. Today in the world everyone wants to receive love rather than giving love. The gospel of Philip powerfully says "No one will be able to receive without faith. No one will be able to give without love".

LOVE

Love is something that is very important.

Actually, love is a need of the hour, to stop wars and live peacefully. Love and affection could change the world and make it a better place to live.

We could start loving, family, neighbors and relatives. As a symbol of love we could share, care and help them and we should also not forget that God's love is up on us, if we live peacefully it is all because of God's love.

God has showered his love through family and friends, so keep loving everyone as they love you.

"True love doesn't have a happy ending
Because true love doesn't even end
So, keep loving everyone"
